Tips for Skittish Cats

What happens if your pet doesn't take an immediate liking to Kittywalk® Penthouse?

Comments from the inventor, Lise King:

Sometimes customers say, "I can't seem to get my cat into my Kittywalk® Penthouse™. It's afraid and won't go in willingly!" That is not an unusual reaction for a pet. To familiarize your pet with being outside of your home and inside Kittywalk® Penthouse, follow these few simple instructions. More than likely, your pet will take to it as his own domain and will want to spend time there.

- Put your Kittywalk® Penthouse inside your home, out of the carry bag but not yet erected, so that your pet can fully inspect and get used to the enclosure at it's leisure.
- When your pet is comfortable near the un-erected Kittywalk® Penthouse –your pet will naturally want to explore it. Make a game of it with a pet toy if that helps.
- When your pet is comfortable around the un-erected Penthouse, set the unit up indoors and let your cat become used to the erected Penthouse.
- After he/she is comfortable playing in the Penthouse indoors, set it up outdoors where you can visually supervise. Allow your pet to use it for short periods of supervised time at first -- then gradually increase the time over the next couple of days. This way your pet will get used to being in an increasingly familiar outdoor space.
- Go slowly. If at first your pet still will not go into the Kittywalk® Penthouse, try again the next day. Praise your pet when it makes advances.
- You will know when your cat is comfortable in the Kittywalk® Penthouse when you watch them lounging or hanging out in the Hammocks. Your cat will let you know when he/she wants to come out of the Penthouse by standing at the door.
